MARD ON SHEEP MEN

The New Rules of the Forest Reserve Make Industry Almost Prohibitive.

ne satisfaction that was apprehended by nose who for some time have been earned advocates of it.

As an illustration of how the reserve fiects the ordinary person, an incident and the property of the reserve fiects the ordinary person, an incident and the property of the reserve fiects the ordinary person, an incident and the property of the reserve fiects which occurred this eek. Two teams which came from ountain Green had traveled probably venty-five miles to the mountains of the reserve, hunted up an old sawmill the and loaded up with slabs which were mildered of no value by the millmen and added the left there. After the teams had arted for home they were halted by the tage rider for that portion of the reserve and required to unload every foot the slabs, as it was against the rules alone and required to unload every foot the slabs, as it was against the rules alone were that much taken away, he slabs are absolutely worthless for nything but wood, and, besides, they alone the purchased sonce from the government as it was.

From the sheep growers, however, and the dependent upon that industry, high means, indirectly, nearly every better in this community, comes the strongs of the reserve besides No. 6, which located away to the southern part of the tract included. This will mean a ardship nor even the few that do get on rom this section. Sheepmen are becoming discouraged over the prospects and any are announcing their intention of olding out of the business altogether, hile others will be forced to leave the puntry with their flocks. As the sheep dustry has been an important one groughout he? ughout the interests il kinds will of necessity suffer keen-yits almost total annihilation, owing the rules governing the reserve.

Policeman Finds Suspicious Character in Front of Cafe.

He has not been on the police force a great while and is not very well acquainted with familiar faces about town. Therefore, he is to be excused for his part in the incident that happened on East Second South street the other afternoon.

While walking his beat last week his eye chanced upon a man leaning idly against the bill of fare board in front of a cafe. The man's appearance did not appeal to the officer particularly, so when he returned half an hour later and found the fellow in the same position, he decided to investigate. Tapping the man on the shoulder, he addressed him thus:

"What do you do for a living?"

The man regarded him with a rather distant air for a moment, and then thinking that he was onto the joke, me piled:

"I do my friends, principally.
"Well, you had better move along.
I've had my eye on you for sorfie time,"
said the policeman as he walked away.
The man was not sure that he appreclated the joke, but said nothing. The next time the officer made his round he found the fellow just where he had
